

MARCHING BANDS

BY BRENDAN EMMETT QUIGLEY

The words in this puzzle march around the grid in two ways. In one formation (“Rows”), words march across – two words for each numbered line, reading consecutively from left to right. The dividing point between these answers is for you to determine, except in row 7, where the words are separated by a black square. In the second formation (“Bands”), words march around each of the six shaded and unshaded bands, starting at the lettered squares (A, B, C, D, E and F) and proceeding in a clockwise direction, one word after another. For example, Band “A” will consist of six consecutive words (a through f) starting in square A and reading around the perimeter of the grid. Again, the dividing point between these answers is for you to determine. All clues are given in order. When the puzzle is completed, each square in the grid will have been used once in a Row word and once in a Band word.
